from the link provided below. It's safe and 100% free. A record number of illegal immigrants have been detained at the U.S.-Mexico border, according to data obtained by CBS News. The Border Patrol has arrested some 193,000 people at the southern border, including a record high of 102,000 in May. Of those arrested, some 66,000 were families and children, according to the data, which was first reported by The Washington Post. This month, the number of illegal crossings is even higher than last year, when a record number of migrants were caught. It's likely that those numbers will surpass 200,000 as the summer heat and increased enforcement efforts fuel an "immigration surge." "For many years, families that have come to the United States illegally have been able to cross the border with confidence, with the knowledge that if they were caught, they would be released from custody in a matter of days,” White House press secretary Sarah Sanders said in a statement to The Post. “That changed on May 7th, when the president took executive action to begin
