A HeLa cell line was screened for the presence of the monocytoid differentiation antigen NCAM. A polyclonal anti-NCAM antibody that reacts with NCAM in the membrane of monocytes was used to detect antigen NCAM in HeLa cells. The NCAM-positive HeLa cells were found to be positive for class II MHC molecules and for Thy-1.1 and Thy-1.2 antigens. The class II MHC determinants of the HeLa cells were detected by two-color flow cytometry with a monoclonal antibody against HLA-DR and a polyclonal anti-HLA-DR. In contrast to homozygous HLA-DR-negative HeLa cells, the DR-positive HeLa cells synthesized and expressed class II MHC determinants. To identify the molecules that are involved in DR expression, the PCR technique was used to amplify the sequences coding for the DR beta 1, DR beta 2 and DR alpha-chains of the major HLA-DR molecule. The DR beta 1, DR beta 2 and DR alpha-chain transcripts were found to be present at a relatively high level in DR-positive HeLa cells. Southern blot analysis demonstrated that there was only one class II MHC gene in HeLa cells. The analysis of DNA molecules hybridized with a genomic DNA fragment coding for the DR alpha-chain indicated that the
