I am not having any issues reading the first line but after I try to read the second line I get the following error message. [line-breaks] Traceback (most recent call last): File "C:/Users/Riskeh/PycharmProjects/Python/samba/Samba_IP_scan.py", line 13, in print(data_list.split(',')) ValueError: need more than 1 value to unpack Does anyone know how I can resolve this problem? A: The value of the first string is, "" (not ""). So do something like: for line in data file: if line.strip(): data_list.append(line) Alternatively, you could use: data_list = [line for line in data_file.split(',') if not line.strip() else None] if line.strip(): A: See the splittlines method of your file object, as described here (the last example is relevant). You need to add a check to see if the string is empty. Otherwise, it will try to take out the last line of the file. If that's not what you want, you need to use splittlines instead of split. For example, txt = ""line 1 line 2 line 3 line 4 line 5"" [line.r Occ13bf012

Since it seems to be rather new (at least as per my experience), a well trained program would be appreciated. By the way, I am using Microsoft Windows XP. My infection started about 1 month ago, when I had a virus alert in my firewall. It seemed to be the virus Lamer, so I ditched my firewall and let it run its course.
