porcine (Sus scrofa) gastric samples using coupled laser excitation: effects of spectra-to-colour mapping. Discrimination of porcine gastric samples on the basis of spectroscopic data obtained by Raman microspectroscopy can be readily achieved by spectral overlay. A new method to exploit the linked chemical and colour information in the Raman spectra of food by mapping spectra-to-colour and by employing sample mapping is proposed and studied. The method is based on the generation of artificial colour images which are then used as sample maps to produce new spectra which can be used to discriminate between samples from different origins. The Raman spectra of the eight gastric samples studied are analysed and a colour/chemical overlay map generated. A systematic analysis of the mapping of pig gastric spectra was performed by generating and analysing the mapped spectra (113 spectra) of 30 samples, and is described and compared with the chemical and morphological analysis of the samples using a correlation coefficient (r) and p-values. The results show that the mapping method enables identification of the gastric samples with greater accuracy than colour and chemical approaches.Q

It is quite affordable and will look great in any room, bedroom, or kitchen. I like the print as it is unique and colorful and the size, at.25" tall (less than an inch) is almost comically small in comparison to the price point and material. It is made of a polyester poly-poular material that is machine washable and dryable. I also like the fact that you can purchase it in a variety of colors. I chose aqua blue. The cost is $17.99, which is $6 less than the next low priced pillow which was the basic PURPLE one (see below). I picked this pillow up at World Market in Dublin, Ohio. The employee was sweet and helpful. There were several types of pillows at the store, but I only picked up one - this one. I had my eye on a more luxurious or spring like one but I wanted the
