Applying Effects After you've created your retouching by selecting and adjusting the image and applying some cropping and sharpening, the next step is to add some effects to create a new look or to enhance the final product. Effects can be as simple as straightening out a background. But if you want to create an overall nice effect, you can add a filter that makes everything look more colorful and adds textured detail to the image, as shown in Figure 14-12. Photoshop Elements includes several filters that offer simple effects, like Picture Frame, B&W, Filter, or Posterize. The filters are offered in a pop-up menu.

The program features many of the core editing tools found in Photoshop, including layer editing, adjustment layers, masking and selections. It is organized in a similar way to Photoshop and is compatible with Windows, Mac, and Linux platforms. You can import, export, create and edit photos, edit video, and create effects and animations with Elements. If you need to change your email address, Photoshop can automatically import your old address from a previous version. To do so, open a.psd file and click File > Close. Click Yes, then Close. In the files folder, you will see an "Import" folder, and inside that, a "Legacy Import" folder. In the Legacy Import folder, you will find a file called: __import_psd.psd. Double-click the file to import it to Photoshop Elements. If your computer runs out of memory while using Photoshop, you can restart Elements and Photoshop will shut down without a problem. To do so, press F5 or Alt+F5.

When the program restarts, open the interface and use a smaller version of the image on the canvas until it has been opened. Retention of preoperative radiotherapy in rectal cancer: the Liverpool experience. The administration of local preoperative radiotherapy to patients with rectal cancer is associated with an improved local recurrence rate and a higher sphincter-preserving resection rate. In this prospective series of 168 patients with rectal cancer, the influence of clinico-radiological factors on the ability to retain radiotherapy was analyzed. Data were obtained from a prospective series of 168 patients treated from 1980 to 1989. Post-operative follow-up ranged from 15 to 125 months (median, 66 months). Tumour differentiation ($P = 0.049$) and the proportion of patients with a circumferential extension greater than or equal to 3 cm into the bowel wall ($P = 0.001$) influenced the ability to retain local treatment. The outcome in terms of local recurrence rates and sphincter-preserving resection rates was similar in patients with well and moderately differentiated tumours whether or not they had received preoperative radiotherapy. These data suggest that the clinical risk factors of circumferential extent and differentiation are the best predictors of the ability to retain radiotherapy in patients with rectal cancer. Courtney Stodden Forced to Squat Leg Call us crazy, but seeing Courtney Stodden do the Squat Leg can make us think she should become a fashion model. Although we know that the "Innocent" star will be turning 23-years-old next month, it would be only fair to give Courtney a modeling contract to show off her new curves. We would think that it would be a good idea to add Courtney to The Agency—where she could work with names such as Adriana Lima and Karlie Kloss. Stodden is currently filming "The Holly Heist" and we just hope that the next movie she is in is something along the same lines as "The Hangover". Q: Was the attention of the community taken away by the new Arqade? This question got close (well, I think it did as I didn't vote to reopen). It was asked on Dec 16 but it has low view count (though it has 0 downvotes) and many of the the answers are from high rep users. Now, was the attention of the community taken away by the new Arqade? A: Without getting into a huge debate about the value of the new Arqade site, I'll just say that the site is still very young, so the attention of the community is likely to be much more divided at the moment. The new site is in a time when we also need to try to readjust to some new changes, such as: the new site has an official site for business questions, meaning that there is a much bigger chance of getting questions from site users who might want to post on other SE sites; the new site also has an official community moderation team, with tools and responsibilities that mean the community can also engage in discussions, help the new mods to develop their tools, and interact with the community to get more feedback about the site. These are just some of the things that come with the new site, and it's possible that these new features will not be immediately apparent to the newcomers, nor to the regular users. Overall, I believe that the new site is a great thing for us - we can all learn a lot from the experience here, and it's great for people who want to start a career in moderation.
