Accordingly, the court held that the injury to the decedent caused by the benzene-water mixture, being a foreseeable injury, was foreseeable by the defendant. Daigle, 613 F.2d at 824. The same principle controls here. 26 For other cases dealing with foreseeability in products liability cases involving fungible products which enter the stream of commerce, see Gatling v. Atl. Because the government knew this to be a fact, it is reasonable to infer that they knew that the benzene would have to be removed from the water before it could be sold in Florida. The government does not dispute this. The government argues, however, that because it did not know the precise amount of benzene which contaminated the water, it should not be responsible for the benzene which ultimately reached the consumer. Things like this actually bring me great joy, because this company does GOOD and the items I received from them were so much fun. And this package of goodness inspired me to create the "4th of July Package" with my own items. I even did a little extra with some silicone from Krystal Glam which had been in my stash for months. This silicone is like liquid gold to me. It's like liquid "toy" that can adhere to a surface...and it gets stronger with time. I had no idea what I was going to do with it, but I just KNEW I had to include it in my package. I love the idea of shiny, sticky, surfboards.
