The Nittany Lions finished in the middle of the pack last year with 1,577 rushing yards. Their success, however, came from a whole lot more than just running back Saquon Barkley. Michigan State finished with 324 rushing yards in the Nittany Lions win. The Spartans were in control of the game at one point and had Barkley in on third down. Ohio State put an end to that. After PSU's win in Columbus, Ohio State head coach Ryan Day admitted that the Nittany Lions had done a great job of putting pressure on the edge of the line on third down. That was the case in the first half as Sam Hubbard found an opening in the line that allowed him to sack Saquon Barkley. The way the Buckeyes have played, the pieces are there for them to take down the line. Ohio State shows a glimpse at that problem for the first time on the season. Video: Ohio State vs Penn State The incident is a good example of why that team can cause trouble for opponents. In the video below, we see Ohio State's defensive line putting a huge hit on Penn State's offensive line. Not only does the defensive line hold their own, but the secondary as well. That's where the problem lies for the Nittany Lions. USATSI You can see that the safety gets too far up as they are waiting for the linebackers to fill the hole between the outside zone and the edge. That leaves the linebackers in the middle of the field all alone. One of the linebackers then becomes forced to make a decision as he is waiting to see what route the back will run. That gives a third option for the back. Ohio State then comes in as the back takes off and the linebacker has to follow. Not only does the linebacker have to get to the back, but the running back is likely going to cut back and make it easier for 6d1f23a050
